A MUNICIPAL LOTTERY

Council of the city of Cleveland now has for its consideration one of the recurrent proposals to establish a public lottery as a way out of financial difficulties. A resolution asks the state legislature to legalize the plan.

Ohio and Cleveland probably are too enlightened to authorize the proposal but it is sufficiently important, nevertheless, to be regarded with some concern and to be squelched promptly.

The lottery is tolerated by some countries and sponsored by a few but this does not alter the fact that it derives its revenues largely from persons who cannot afford to lose the money they invest. Any chance at a sudden fortune arouses the hopes of the poor and those lands which permit schemes of this kind have found that a large part of the investors are men and women who buy tickets with money which they should have used for other purposes.

The world hears occasionally of the lucky individual who has won a fortune from these schemes but it does not hear of the thousands who have taken money they needed to buy food for their families and have lost it in chasing the mirage of sudden wealth held out by the state or municipal lottery.

The United States outlawed such games of chance early in its history and killed the scheme by denying the use of the mail to all projects of this kind. The Cleveland councilman would evade this provision by making his lottery a local affair in which the mail would play no part.

The plan, doubtless, would appeal to enough suckers to bring in considerable revenue. It retains, however, all of the objectionable features which caused the scheme to be outlawed in the comparatively unenlightened days of the country's early history. Cities must resort to all kinds of plans to support the government but a lottery has no decent place among them.

AN OLD-FASHIONED WINTER

We would be the last to deny the old ones the pleasure they derive from talking about "the good, old-fashioned winters" but when they recall their boyhood experiences, this later generation may be pardoned if it asks them to remember the winter of 1933-34.

Here is a winter which can stand up alongside the best or the worst out of the past. The thermometer has touched the lowest mark reached in 13 years. It has not been any passing cold snap but continued winter which made its early appearance with the first day of the hunting season away back in November and has held on tenaciously with only a few brief interludes of warmth.

There has been plenty of snow, there have been such minor blizzards as Ohio is able to provide and there have been days of dazzling sunshine such as only zero weather can bring.

If there were any sleighs left, conditions would have been right for an old-time sleighing party. Nothing, in fact, has been overlooked in building a setting in which today's generation can visualize the stories they hear from their elders.

True, a frozen water faucet has replaced the old pump which had to be thawed and the modern householder puts his coal into one furnace instead of running from room to room to kindle the roaring fires in open grates. The time which a forefather spent in breaking a path to the barn to attend his livestock is consumed by his grandson in starting a refractory motor.

The cold nips ears, however, as sharply as it did in the old days, the snow creaks just as sharply under the wheels of the occasional wagon which remains and people find the weather just as engaging a source of conversation as ever. Just one advantage remains to the old-timers. Weather records were not so carefully observed in their day and when they tell of the time the bottom dropped out of the family thermometer, no one will pull out a government weather report to contradict them.

THE STARS SAY

For Thursday, February 22

A day of conflicting planetary influences, with excellent prospects and opportunities, but these offset by open as well as secret enmity and hostility, with much in the way of hindrance, jealousy and intrigue to be bravely confronted and decisively vanquished. There is menace of underhand dealings from many angles to be dragged into the open, but it is enjoined that excessive violence, turbulence and rash actions may not prove effective.

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of a year of excellent prospects and opportunities, but these may be found beset with subtle enmity as well as open hostility and opposition.

A child born on this day may be talented, ambitious and industrious, but impetuous and violent. Notable nativity: George Washington.

The captured Dillinger gang had fire machine guns, 50 pistols and revolvers, four bullet-proof vests, 3,500 rounds of ammunition and three automobiles with police radios. Yet some Americans lie awake nights in fear that Germany is building up another army.—St. Louis Star-Times.

O. O. MCINTYRE

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

NEW YORK, Feb. 21—The cocktail room in the smart restaurant is the dullest, most tightly packed spot in town. Niche in easy access to bars, now fringed with plants to keep drinkers away and obey the law, these bright-lit rooms have taken the speak-easy's place in one jump. Ex-speak-easies have died. The small cocktail room illustrates New York's sardine complex in herding. The more intimate, the more they love it. The continental flavor is provided by tambourine-capped boys circulating constantly with cigarettes and lights. Also spindly tables against deep divans. And dogs everywhere.

The de luxe havens provide hors-d'oeuvres gratis and there is no cocktail the modern bartender does not know. At least he will attempt it. Few return such libations for re-making. The intimacy delays dinner as never before. Some do not get started until 10.

This gives dining rooms at the real dinner hour a look of utter desolation. Theatres again complain of late comers and "the affront to art." But theatre goers feel when forced to go to agencies to pay exorbitant tariff for only fair seats they may go when they please. And so they may!

Ted Cook, who has written humor most of his writing days, has turned to fiction as a relaxation and disposed of several efforts. Aside from his hobby of raising sheep dogs, Cook is also an artist. Those old-timey almanac things in his pieces are his. O. yes, a sturdy redwood grows through the center of his studio.

The late Basil King and Jim Tully were warm friends—a friendship dating to their first meeting. On this occasion Tully blurted to the novelist: "You don't like me Mr. King. I was a bum." And bestowing a quick Texas hug, the novelist replied: "That's nothing, Jim. I was an Episcopal minister."

Because West 72d street was where I first lived in New York, it's mellow with sentiment. Other streets change but because I know 72d so well the changes are more noticeable. After 20 years, scarcely anything remains of the old days, save Holder Brothers news stand, the Hotel Hargrave and a branch of the Corn Exchange. Gone are the familiar faces—Dr. Pease, of anti-cigarette fame, Daddy Browning, the Knox hat family, the Huylers of the candy stores, the Isador Strauses, Copeland Townsend and his Majestic, the glittering grocers Park and Tilford and Acker, Merrill and Condit. And that derelict of the lawn, the one-legged newsboy at the subway who slept in his stand and darted out otter-like in traffic on crutches so nimbly.

Among most distinguished feminine handwritings is that of Kathleen Norris, the novelist. The small and well rounded letters are like the chirography of a steel engraving, exquisitely chiseled. It's an achievement flowering during her earlier days when she was permitted to tell all the news of her family to a relative in a nunnery on only one small sheet of paper.

Among best of the old-time story tellers is the actor, Lew Fields. His gestures are an art all alone. While a Dutch comedian, he can spin a yarn in almost any dialect and has mastered the technique of proper pauses as no one else. And speaking of gestures, few of the moderns can touch the mimic Sheila Barrett. Her impression of monocled George Arliss interviewing the movie's hippy hussy with that baggy banter is, to inflate The New Yorker's whimsy, "the neatest trick of the year."

Almost everybody recalls David Warfield's epochal performance in "The Music Master," the climax being a scene in which Warfield, as Herr Barwig, defending a mistreated ship of a girl in a wealthy family, shouted between magnificent sobs: "If you don't want her, I want her." It became a part of the routine of every impersonator for years. And, believe it or not, that ship of a girl is none other than Laura Hope Crews, the portly portrayal of a tyrannical old dowager in a seasonal offering. Tempora mutantur!

But of all imitators I recall most vividly that of a repertoire comic in the long ago. "My next," he said, "will be of Buffalo Bill!" His left index finger munched his upper lip and his right index made a goatee from his chin. And grandma had to take me out in the alley to shake me out of a hysteria.

HEALTH

Assure Baby Good Health in Adult Life.

Infant feeding has been greatly simplified within the past decade. Yet even today many young mothers confess they are bewildered and uncertain when planning the baby's menu. They are at a loss as to when to wean the baby, when certain foods should be included in the diet, and how often baby should be fed.

Let me say to every new mother that proper eating habits for the young infant are at the foundation of its future health and happiness. When good eating habits are established early in life, the mother saves herself much unnecessary worry and grief. By good habits, I mean regular feedings at regular intervals. When properly trained the baby will learn to wake at feeding time and to sleep between times.

Contrary to a popular notion, over 95 per cent of all mothers can nurse their babies. Every baby should be breast fed whenever possible. There is no satisfactory substitute for mother's milk.

Regular Feeding Schedule

The baby should be nursed every four hours during the course of the day. The child is expected to gain an average of five ounces a week for the first few months. Failing to do this, the feedings should be given every three hours instead of every four hours.

If the baby fails to gain weight and is not making the necessary progress, the fault may be due to lack of mother's milk or that the milk is not rich enough. In either case it is imperative that the baby be weaned and a milk formula substituted. Your own doctor will advise you just how to prepare the formula required by your baby.

I am often asked, "When can the baby be given orange juice?" A teaspoon of orange juice may be given the infant when it is one month old. The amount is gradually increased until at three months, a tablespoon is given twice a day. Tomato juice or prune juice may be substituted for the orange juice.

As I view it, it is wise to give every infant cod liver oil or a substitute. Ask your doctor to tell you just how to give this to your baby. Another problem which often confronts the young mother is when to give cereals. Cereal may be given at six months. Farina, cream of wheat, or strained oatmeal, excellent additions to the diet.

Never force the baby to eat. Encourage it to eat its food by serving it at regular intervals. I cannot repeat too often that proper eating habits are the short cut to health and happiness.

Answers to Health Queries

Mother, Q.—I am a young woman of 27 and have a little boy five years of age. I have had asthma practically all my life and now my child seems to have a tendency in this direction. What can I do to clear it up before it becomes chronic in his case?

A.—Asthma may be due to a number of causes. Various tests will be helpful in locating a possible cause. This in turn will determine the necessary treatment. For full particulars send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

D. S. Q.—What would cause an empty, nauseous feeling in the stomach shortly after eating? I have been working hard and seem to be nervous and tired most of the time. Would this have any connection?

A.—Nervousness always affects the digestion. Eat simple foods and make sure that you are getting sufficient rest and relaxation. For full particulars send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

CATARRHAL DEAFNESS MAY BE OVERCOME

If you have Catarrhal Deafness or are even just a little hard of hearing or have head noises, go to Lease Drug Co. or your druggist and get 1 ounce of Parment (double strength), and add to it ¼ pint of hot water and a little granulated sugar. Take 1 tablespoonful four times a day.

This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises. Closed nostrils should open, breathing become easy and the mucus stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to prepare, costs little and is pleasant to take. Anyone losing hearing or who has Catarrhal Deafness or head noises should give this prescription a trial. Adv.

"Depression Brought Its By-Products and We'll Benefit", Quota Club Is Told

"By-Products of the Depression" were discussed by V. R. Martin, Salem, regional sales manager for the Maytag company, who was the guest speaker at a dinner meeting at the Quota club Tuesday evening at the Fleischer Inn, East State st.

While not attempting to minimize the results of the last few years, Martin was, nevertheless, able to bring a message to show that many business and personal lessons have been learned and that these will be of inestimable value in the years to come.

In Martin's opinion the outstanding by-products of the depression are: "A greater appreciation for our city; the placing of a higher value on our respective positions; an improvement of individual abilities that will enable us to become more valuable in business pursuits, and above all, a charitable attitude toward neighbors and business associates."

Throughout his talk Martin interspersed illustrating stories with logic to prove the depression has taught business people many valuable lessons.

This meeting was arranged by Miss Iva Hoopes and Zillah Stamp. The club is conducting a membership campaign during this month and two new members were reported.

Several members were reported at a meeting in two weeks at the Fleischer Inn. It will be in charge of Miss Alice Gladden and Miss Ruth Hoch.

authorizing the council to regulate the mayor's working hours. * * *

It would seem, on general principles that in the absence of specific authority for such purpose, conferred by statute or charter, the council would not have power to regulate the working hours of the mayor, or to restrict his legal right to engage in other employment.

While the council may impose certain duties upon the mayor (see municipal corporations, paragraph 206) it is not specifically authorized to prescribe the details as to the manner in which such duties shall be performed. It seems that power for such purpose could be conferred by charter provision.

The policy of the statutory law seems to be to leave to the mayor's discretion the details as to the manner of performance of his duties, and as to the extent to which he may engage in private employment, subject to liability to removal from office for neglect to perform his official duties.

Next Monday evening the Rebekahs will hold a card party for Odd Fellows and Rebekahs. Mrs. W. B. Treadwell is chairman of the committee on arrangements. Refreshments will be served.

Missionary Speaks

Marion Duncan, a former missionary to Tibet, gave an interesting talk Monday evening at the Christian church, telling of his experience in this strange and little-known country in the heart of Asia. He expects to return to his work there, leaving in June, and it will take him four months to reach his destination. The last stage of the journey will be on horse or mule back for a month, after a long trip up the Yangtze river from Shanghai, China. In the fertile valleys between the mountain ranges of Tibet, almost anything can be grown except watermelons.

Mr. Duncan said. Later in the evening he repeated his talk before the Men's Bible class of Grace Reformed Sunday school, whose members were having a business and social meeting in the church parlor.

Gangsters Aid In Toughy Kidnap Trial

CHICAGO, Feb. 21—Out of the mouth of gangsters, men who rarely talk, the state has drawn words it believes will convict Roger Toughy of kidnaping.

Walter A. (Buck) Henrichsen, one time beer wagon chauffeur and bodyguard, testified yesterday he helped collect the $70,000 ransom that bought John Factor, international speculator, back from captivity.

His surprise testimony was hardly less sensational than the previous statements of Isaac Costner, who put the finger of accusation directly on Toughy and his two fellow defendants, Albert Kator and Gustav Schaefer.

The prosecution said today that it now has given the jury a complete picture of Factor's abduction last July 1.

Henrichsen, who drove a beer truck for the Toughy gang before he was demoted to the more prosaic job of guarding Toughy's two children, testified that he collected the ransom money along with the late Jim (Troubles) Tribbles.

Pleads Guilty

HAMILTON, O., Feb. 21—Henry Schmidt, a butcher, pleaded guilty to a charge of receiving merchandise stolen from a truck after its two drivers were abducted, and was sentenced to one to seven years in prison.

He was the fourth to be sentenced in connection with the hijacking.

MILWAUKEE—With the advent of repeal, student drinking has decreased noticeably, in the opinion of Charles Coburn, manager of the student union at Marquette university here. His reason is that most students find the new liquor system a bit beyond their means, but having tasted it, they are no longer content with the pre-repeal variety.

pline." Literature will be given to those present.

Akron Preacher Gives Address At Nazarene Church

Present day events and their significance in Bible prophecy were discussed by Rev. "Bill" Denton of the Akron Gospel Tabernacle and the Akron Furnace Street Mission in a sermon on "Plunging Headlong Into Armageddon" at a service Tuesday evening at the Nazarene church sponsored by the Men's Personal Workers' league.
Rev. Denton expressed the opinion that "Jesus Christ is preparing to come for the church while all of Europe waits to light the match which will start the next world war. When the world war starts I believe God is going to deliver the church," he said.

Prophecies "Dovetail"
The speaker told his auditors that present day events reported in the newspapers "dovetail" into prophecies recorded in Matthew 24.
"The Church," Rev. Denton explained, "is not just those persons whose names are on the church roll, but those whose lives have been transformed through faith in the blood of Jesus Christ and in whose hearts the Holy Spirit dwells."

The need of the day, according to Rev. Denton, "is honest-to-God personal workers, honest-to-God Christians and honest-to-God preachers." "I would rather be a fool for Jesus Christ than a tool for the devil," he said.
He admonished his auditors to accept Jesus Christ as their personal Saviour, telling them that "you have no time to waste."

Special music for the service was furnished by workers from the mission.

Assist in Service
Daniel E. Patrone of New Jersey and Lawrence McAllen, chalk artist, had part in the prelude to the service. These church workers are holding a series of evangelistic services at the Nazarene church. Patrone, who will deliver the sermons, is also a violinist. Special music will be featured.

The Personal Workers' league will hold a gospel service at Washingtonville Friday evening and the members will meet at the room, South Broadway, and go in a body. Out-of-town musicians will give a program at an open meeting of the league at 2:30 p. m. Sunday.

PARIS—The Elytrian, which embodies some of the features of a flying vessel with those of a monoplane, is being tested by the inventor, Charles de Rouge. The "flying rig" consists of a mast, equipped with two maneuverable "demon" designed to correct exaggerated "pitching", or "rolling". Such a rig, it is maintained, would have prevented the crash of a "flying wing", or tailless plane, recently tested in Germany, in which the pilot narrowly escaped death.

NEW ORLEANS—Major General Allison O'ne used the same instruments in designing the proposed new city hall here as were employed in drawing plans for the old one in 1816 by James Gallier, famous New Orleans architect.

Tried in Kidnaping

Isaac Costner
Although he was trapped by Federal men in Baltimore to face mail robbery charges, government officials waived their hold on Isaac Costner temporarily and he was taken to Chicago to answer to charges of kidnaping John (Jake the Barber) Factor. Above Costner is shown in the Chicago criminal court building.

Theater Attractions

"SLEEPERS EAST," adapted from the popular novel by Frederick Nebel, makes its appearance at the State theater Thursday. It will play the one day only. Wynne Gibson has the feminine lead and she is assisted by Preston Foster, Harvey Stephens, Mona Barrie, Roger Imhoff and Carol Naish.

Only Witness to Crime
The story concerns a girl out of prison on parole who is rather down on her luck as the picture opens. She accepts a job as a paid companion at a party of wealthy people.

After the party she visits a gambling place with the son of the city's mayor, the son being much attracted to her. The boy engages in an argument with the proprietor, which results in the murder of the latter. The girl, the only witness to the crime, afraid of what might happen if she stays in the city, returns to her home town.

There she meets her childhood sweetheart, still deeply in love with her. In the meantime, the mayor and his grafting men, seeking to win the coming election, pin the crime on a "public enemy." A prominent young attorney learns the truth of the case, becomes interested and goes on a search for the girl while the trial is in progress. He locates her in Ohio, where she had gone to avoid the man who loves her, for she is afraid to tell him of her troubles.
